Gentlemen:

Am enclosing a list of old paper money that I have and would like to know if you are interested in same, or whether you would know of anyone who may be, as a whole or in part.

If these bills are not of any value would appreciate your word, and the return of the list, at your early convenience.

Sincerely yours

Miss. Annette McGee

Dear Madam:

Your bills are of the usual run that show up from time to time. There are countless thousands of varieties of these made up to 1861. Regardless of date and denomination these broken bank bills, as they are called, are worth from five to ten cents each, according to condition. The foreign ones are worth about five cents each and the Confederate ones only two or three cents. I should judge you have about $4.00 or $5.00 worth in the lot. If you care to send them on, we would give you either five or ten cents throughout, according to their condition.

Very truly yours,

HW:JG
